A Last Word

Asoka Das

In the universe of time two years is but an instant. Almost without realising it, my term of office is over, and at Nashville a new President will be taking over. It is appropriate that at this time I report to you, the general membership, on the state of the Orissa Society of America. In some areas we have made progress; in others the progress is debatable.

Perhaps the most visible development during the last two years has been the establishment of the Journal of the Orissa Society of America. From the beginning, when the new format of the Journal was being discussed, as a successor to the Newsletter, it had my full support. If you look around publications of other Indian Associations in Canada and the United States, I doubt that you will find any that matches our quality in both content and getup. We can all be proud of the Journal.

I note with great pride the beautiful and elegant Oriya print in this journal. Printing in Oriya has now passed into the computerised high-tech era, a long throw from the palm-leaf manuscripts of our forefathers. Although the OSA has had no active role in the development of the digital Oriya fonts, we can be sure that the Journal of OSA provided the impetus to Dr.L. Mansinha and Sabita and Gagan Panigrahi to undertake this project on their own. This benefits us all and our Journal now looks elegant.

The Journal is in fact a very expensive operation for the Society. With rising costs, printing and mailing the Journal costs $800.00 per regular issue, and double that for the Souvenir issue. The main threat to the existence of the Journal is a matter of funds. By making sure that all the communication from the Executive to the members was through the pages of the Journal, we have saved some money, which then goes towards the cost of producing the Journal.

A substantial part of the annual budget is the interest income derived from the life membership dues. A glance through the 1987 Souvenir shows a total of 107 patrons and life members. This year that number has increased by 70%, to 171 patrons and life members. I am particularly happy that this has occurred during my two year term as president. But having said that, let us recognise the weak state of our finances. The total life membership dues come to $17100., giving an annual interest of about $1700. This is hardly enough to run a society and publish a journal.

The Orissa Society of America is an umbrella organisation for the various local chapters. It is above all a voluntary association, providing a limited degree of service to its membership. In the past the activities of the Executive Body, including the President, Vice President, Secretary- Treasurer and the Editor-in- Chief, have been mainly ceremonial and perfunctory. We all enjoyed the Annual convention where we got together, ate, drank and gossiped.

It is my unpleasant duty to report on two major crises that occurred during my two year term. The first was the the change of venue of the 1988 convention at very short notice from Boston to Saginaw. Details of that crises are now well known, and I wil not dwell upon it here. Sufficient to state that the crisis was solved by the quick and enthusiastic action by the OSA Michigan Chapter. If nothing else this points out the fact that the true power and potency of a small organisation like ours resides in the local chapters, and ultimately in the spirited membership.

The OSA has been often urged to do something other than just meet annually. Therefore right from the beginning, in 1987, I, with the help of many others, started thinking of sponsoring a major cultural group from Orissa. We all will enjoy the the finest Oriya music, live. The artists themselves will have an opportunity of visiting Canada and the United States. I had visions of many such OSA sponsored cultural tours, in which the OSA and the artistic community in Orissa develop a symbiotic, mutually beneficial continuing relationship. You all know that the OSA sponsored tour was abruptly terminated in December, 1988.

Directly, and by implication, I have been blamed by many. But only those who know me closely realise just how much hurt and disappointed I was by the turn of events. The organisation of the tour before the arrival of the artists, and their care and welfare basically took up most of my daily life for months. I was emotionally and personally attached to this project. The highpoint for me would have been a live and memorable evening of music by Oriya artists. Unfortunately, my hopes came crashing down, and however much I tried to rescue the situation, I failed. I implored, requested, begged, but to no avail. At my request others tried, and failed.

My family has fully supported my involvement with OSA, first for the Toronto convention in 1986, then for the campaign for election, and finally during the two crises. After the musical tour debacle we have wondered why is it that when we all give so much of our time and energy to projects, do we have to undergo so much mental agony afterwards. Essentially I wished for nothing other than the betterment of the OSA. So why me?

I congratulate the new President and Vice- President. At the time I pen this, the results are not known. But both the slates consist of very well qualified candidates. Mr Keshab Dwivedy has been elected as Secretary- Treasurer by acclamation. My congratulations to him. I have no doubt that I am leaving the OSA in good hands.

During my term office I have requested advice and help from many of you. Even more touching have been those instances where members have helped even before I have asked. It has been a memorable two years. To each one of you, my heartfelt thanks.

*Like seven ribbons in the air
Made of silk and satin -- light and fair,
RED It is the blood that touches wine
A heart so full it glows and shines,
ORANGE Wondrous as the sun at setting place
A dance of fire sparkling with grace,
YELLOW Merry as the laughter I wear
A canary's song, whispering, in humble ear,
GREEN Full of thoughts, hopes, and dreams
Children playing, life it seems,
BLUE In the sky, heaven, and star
Looks so close yet so far,
INDIGO She is caring, kind, but shy
Giving peace . . . , so gentle her cry,
VIOLET Like royalty, filled with pride
Comes and goes, moves with stride,
Who is she? Don't you know?
Her beauty withstands all, she is the rainbow.*

Expression

Chandra Misra

"All I want is to be loved." -- Wanting to be loved, to be lovable, is not really a desire for how I want to be, but for how I want others to be.

*"I need your heart and your eyes and your ears and your touch and your words.
I want you to see me and hear me and feel me and speak to me and love me for my desire to be loved.*

How do I get your love? I must drop my dream of love. Love is not saying nice things to people or smiling or doing good deeds. Love is love. I need not strive for love but be it.

It is most satisfying when it fits the rhythm of our need either physical or mental.

By giving what I want, I feel that I have what I thought I lacked before.

Brave Soldier

Devjani Mishra

*Brave soldier
really just a child
wasted by the bullet
of the gun
of a stranger
They took you away
they told you that if you loved your freedom
you would fight for it die for it -- would you kill for it too?
you once lived in a
big white house
Now your home is the darkness
the blackness of shoveled
earth, and a box and I
I, guilty
of the crime
of survival
can never be free
chained as I am to your memory --
tell me, brave dead soldier is this what freedom means?*

Devjani Mishra is a junior at Newburgh Free Academy. She is the coeditor of the school literary magazine, 'The Colonnade'.

The Big City

Sarita Misra

*Faces in a crowd
Appear distant and cold
Voices talking loud
Sound unfriendly and bold*

*Trapped within this city
I feel so small and meek
Filled with doubt and pity
I feel so frail and weak*

*The horns of cars are screaming
Blowing messages into my brain
This city holds no meaning
It is driving me insane*

*I will have to learn to laugh
In order to ease my pain
But still I ask myself: "By staying here,
What shall I ever gain?"*

A Poem

Somia Mansinha

*warmest reminiscences of Grandma,
stifling hot days
relieved with lemonade.
hearing her voice,
tell tales
of archaic days.
quavering voice,
sometimes tense
picking up kettles.
radiant youth
spoke starry
with eyes
sometimes watery.
Physically alive
mentally vacant.
robbed over time
left no zest remembers not who I am
hurts to see savage disease
speaks of rubber cement falling out of trees
incoherent mumbling
talks to grandpa
rest in peace
watch her disappear
watch her no more
no more.*

This poem was inspired by the horrors of Alzheimer's Disease. Some experts predict that as many as one quarter of all senior adults living in North America will be affected. The 'Grandma' referred to in the poem is not Somia's own grandmother, who is in very good health. Somia is completing Grade 13 in London, Ontario and is selecting an university for a Communication Studies program.

The Plea

Pramila Rath Chetty

*My precious eleven / twelve years old,
Roaming around carrying the heaviest load,
of arms and ammunition,
and whispering to fellowmen in a frigid tone.*

My Angel pre-teen around the world is out on a secret suicidal mission, in the name of patriotism / oppression / religion.

*My Darling ! My Little Dove ! You may not know, that they, at the top, have made you a pawn,
for what does this war mean to you, My Budding Cherub !
or to me, but ruthless, senseless destruction of love, life, freedom, and fruitful continuation ?*

*Pray, fly to me, fly to mom's open arms,
Yes, child ! it's your mother - silly and worried plain,
looking out all over eagerly,
Gases, guns and bombs darken the lane,
Please come home, eat well, sleep soundly,
and wake up to a beautiful morn,
far away from the Horrid zone.*

*For what does the war do to you, son!
War that brings nothing but annihilation?*

The New American Frontier: My Perspective

Anoop Mishra

In the midst of the American Revolution, the colonists in their revolutionary effort against England were failing miserably. At about this time, Benjamin Franklin proposed a theory of why the colonists were not faring well. He illustrated his idea by drawing a picture of a snake. This snake was divided into thirteen parts, each part representing a colony. He said that when the snake is divided, it loses its ability to function and is no longer effective. Likewise, when the revolutionaries fight in disunity as thirteen independent colonies, they also could not be effective. When the colonies finally fought England as one single entity, the United States of America, however, success immediately followed.

Although this depiction was made over 200 years ago, its basic message of unity is still very much applicable in today's fast-paced technological society. It is also one issue we cannot afford to circumvent if we are going to be optimistic about the new American frontier. In consideration of my perspective of the new American frontier, we have to realize that I do believe in a bright future for this country. But I also believe that we can only secure a positive attitude toward the new frontier if we alleviate the magnitude of some problems our society now faces. We all know that drug abuse, AIDS, environmental collapse, poverty, economic turmoil, and education are problems that we must consider. However, in my opinion, at the root of all these problems lie two principles we as a people must ultimately confront for the sake of a terrific new American frontier. These are: (1) Disunity, which plagues our nation, and (2) an apathetic populace which is tearing the fabric of this nation.

Initially, when we look at the idea of unity in attempting to establish a better future, we cannot ignore Benjamin Franklin's message: a unified people can help to ensure a successful outcome. We do not have to contemplate for a long period of time to find empirical evidence. In both world wars, U.S. involvement was based upon a unified desire to participate, consequently allowing for military success for the United States. Vietnam is the contrasting example. America looks upon that war effort with sadness due to the failed effort. The failure in Vietnam can, in some way, be linked to the lack of unified support for the war by the American people and the lack of cohesive leadership. As I see it, two types of social tensions serve against unity.

The first type is racial inequality. Minority status has improved greatly since the 1950's when Martin Luther King, Jr. first paved the road of equality among all races. Unfortunately, however, certain roadblocks have been set up which detract from these efforts. With the Japanese supposedly controlling American markets and Asians supposedly dominating education, feelings of animosity are on the rise. Or even worse, we seem to be thinking that racial equality has been achieved because of the economic success of Asian-Americans. Curtis Chang of Harvard University notes that people use the statistic of the Asian-American's median income being higher than that of the white American's median income to support the myth that racial equality definitely exists. After all, since minorities statistically seem to be enjoying economic success, wouldn't that signify the absence of racial tensions? Unfortunately, when dealing with statistics, we have to keep in mind the saying: "Statistics are like a bikini. What they reveal is suggestive, but what they conceal is vital." (Student Writers at Work, 1983, p.91) The concealed principle in this case is that there is no correlation between economic equality and true racial equality. A tremendous amount of progress in the area of racial unity has been made, but a great deal still needs to be made. We have come a long way, but we cannot simply take an exit from the road Dr. King initially paved. We must continue down that road until we reach our destination of racial equality. Instead of diverting our attention toward trivial issues such as the color of one's skin, the new American frontier should see people of all races working together to overcome problems we all have in common.

The second kind of unity I foresee to be essential to the new American frontier is global unity. The spirit of cooperation should be found among the people and governments of all nations. As we head into the twentieth century, the major problems political, economic, and social, can only be solved if governments work together rather than against each other. In the 1980's we have witnessed the European Economic Community strengthen to better the economy of each member. The Soviet Union is gradually moving away from its isolationist policies and establishing relations with all forms of governments. The Third World Asian and Latin American nations are relying more on the U.S. and international organizations such as the International Monetary Fund to solve their shared crisis of foreign debts.

A prosperous new American frontier will require nations to mutually satisfy each other's needs. With a unified effort on the part of all countries to solve crucial problems, not only could we establish a desirable new American frontier, but a desirable new global frontier.

Unity, however, is not the panacea for the problems America faces. The second major obstacle that must be put aside is apathy. As our society progresses, it seems that individuals in our society become more withdrawing. We seem to care about our own selfish interests rather than the interests of our fellow human. Using the words of former Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, if something does not present "a clear and present danger" to us, we show no concern about it.

The example that absolutely jumps out at me is political apathy in this country. Recent studies have shown that only half of the registered voters in this nation voted in the last presidential election. Even a lower percentage vote in local elections. The percentages in both areas have been steadily declining over the past thirty years. It never ceases to amaze me how a country can enthusiastically send billions of dollars in foreign aid to promote democracy around the world, and yet have such a difficult time practicing democracy at home. Although a few people cannot vote because of special circumstances, most who do not vote are simply indifferent to what happens. Most young voters, especially, could care less about elections. But that same young person who refused to vote in the local election will be the first to vote in the family meeting when his twelve o'clock curfew is in jeopardy.

Professor Alvin Toffler attempts to find a reason for this indifference in his bestselling book, Future Shock. He clarifies that our society is increasingly becoming obsessed with technology and material wealth. Our society is progressing at such an accelerated rate, people almost have to be concerned solely with their own lives in order to survive. Economic and political competition is destroying the Andy Taylors and Mayberrys of America and replacing them with Donald Trumps and Manhattans. In this major shift, values and ethics have been taken hostage and held at gunpoint by people like Ivan Boesky and Michael Deaver. With this sudden shift of individual priorities, people have forgotten about other people. We no longer think about the environment or the economy as long as it does not harm us in any way. The only time we communicate with our neighbors anymore is when we threaten to call the pound if their dogs continue to destroy our garbage all over the yard. For Americans, apathy is running rampant when it comes to long-range interests. UCLA Professor Norman Cousins accurately portrays the problem when he observes: "As individuals, we are more angered by an automobile speeding through a puddle and spraying us with muddy water than we are by contaminated rainfall that jeopardizes the world's agriculture. People lather themselves with lotion for protection against sunburn, but they are curiously impassive about surplus solar radiation that can disfigure coming generations." ("Let's Think About Our Global Obligations" Christian Science Monitor, March 7, 1989, p.18) The quality of the new American frontier will greatly depend upon America's reviving values such as compassion and caring.

In retrospect, the new American frontier's status will depend upon our ability to handle the two basic problems of disunity and apathy in this country. Even though we read and hear about specific problems such as arms control via the media, we cannot afford to overlook the foundations of these specific problems. By working together and allowing our moral obligations toward other people dictate our actions, the new American frontier does look bright. If Benjamin Franklin's snake, the United States of America, acts as one single entity with the correct guidance and purpose, it can expect to experience many more victories and successes in the future.

Marital Conflicts : Sources ,Types and Resolution

Amiya K Mohanty

This article is an attempt, to analyze briefly the sources and types of marital conflicts, and to suggest certain guidelines for conflict resolution. Although the findings are based on studies pertaining to native American couples, they are applicable to Asian American couples as well.

Conflict is a social process which is defined as a "confrontation between individuals or groups, over scarce resources, controversial means, incompatible goals, or combination of these". Conflict may arise over a very broad range of issues and conflict behaviour may range from the use of physical force to non-violent non-cooperation. Many sociologists have convincingly shown that conflict is an inevitable part of all human association, where people are involved.

Conflict in context of marriage is usually thought of as consisting of quarrelling, disagreements and arguments, occasionally accompanied by physical violence. It can range from a variety of psychological and emotional confrontations to life threatening and life taking physical attacks. Practically no marriage proceeds smoothly without disagreements and difficulties. This is because the relationship in marriage is intimate, where expectations for specific role behaviour are not precise and clearcut. Consequently, satisfactions may be so subtle that they are hard to define and violations of expectations are hard to pin down.

The sources of conflicts:

Husbands and wives fight about virtually anything and everything. Often, a marital conflict begins with a minor incidence and ends with serious explosion. For all the variety, most fights can be classified under one of three major categories: situational, personality or structural conflicts.

Situational conflicts: Situational conflicts are probably most common. There are disagreements about matters that arise out of everyday life, such as, where to eat, what to eat, where to go for vacation, what channel of T.V. to watch etc. Situational conflicts often are totally unexpected. Frequently they are short lived. As one man put it, "it is hard to remember what it is we fight about most of the time, afterward, it is business as usual". When situational conflicts are recollected, they often seem silly or outrageous. In the heat of the battle however, even the most trivial subject leads to violent conflict.

Personality Conflicts: Personality conflicts arise out of the problems of mutual acceptance of each other. If mates generally accept each other "as is", there will be nothing to fight about. As one man, married 30 years put it, "she has a right to be like she is. If I change her in my own image, I might not like her".

Personality conflict is a special problem when couples are mismatched for instance, a teetotaler married to an alcoholic or an atheist married to a devoutly religious person. In fact, studies have shown that most of the time personality conflicts focus on small matters; for example, on whether one replaces or fails to replace the toothpaste cap or whether one likes to sleep in complete dark or with a night light. Often, both partners discover that though minor, it is hard to change deeply ingrained habits. Husbands and wives may feel that it is stupid to bother each other over minor issues. Yet having to live with such problems day in and day out may be unbearable. What makes matter worse is that most people do not have an easy time accepting personal criticism. Even when our mate is obviously trying to help or improve us we may feel attacked.

Structural conflicts: Structural conflicts involve the power relationship between the mates. Power in marriage, such as: who makes the decisions, who does what can be very complex and explosive. Power is the ability to influence another person or group. Most of the time we are not aware of the power aspects of our relationships in marriage because we believe, that intimate relationships are based on love alone.

Besides when we think of power we tend to think of force. Infact, exercise of power is often subtle and is not constantly exercised. It comes into play when an issue is important to both people and there is a conflict in goals.

Traditionally, husbands have held ultimate authority over their wives. However, the absolute control of the family by the husband has substantially declined during last few decades. Specially, if the wife works, she has gained power in the family. Studies have shown that employed wives have greater influence in deciding family size and how money is to be spent. However, relatively her status might have risen but few achieve absolute equality with husband in terms of power.

Types of Conflicts:

With respect to types of martial conflict the most basic distinction involves overt and covert conflict. Overt conflict is conflict that is open and can be directly observed. By contrast covert conflict is hidden and cannot be directly observed.

Overt conflict can take three forms: acute, progressive or habituated. Acute conflict is more prevalent early in marriage. It is an argument about some specific event. Unless couples can resolve an acute conflict, there is high probability that it will become progressive. In some marriages, certain areas of conflict flair up periodically since no stable solution is reached. This is habituated conflict. Covert conflicts are the ones where there is emotional withholding. Many professionals see covert conflicts as potentially more damaging to intimate relationships than open fighting. If conflict becomes overt, the individuals become well aware that there is a problem and may attempt to find a solution. But this does not happen in covert conflict.

Major Conflict Issues:

Studies of conflicts in marriage agree that the most common issue over which partners disagree and argue is money management. The other issues of conflict are related to discipline of children, household jobs and duties, (task allocation), in-law relationships, personalities and habits and sexual relationship.

Conflict Resolution and Management:

The terms resolution and management are often used interchangeably. Infact, today the concept conflict management is widely used by both marriage counselors and marital therapists. Marriage counselors and marital therapists provide various guidelines for effective management of conflict through improved communications and effective negotiation.

Following is a useful Eleven Point Plan of Constructive Conflict Management provided by Hine. These rules might well be used to handle conflict in any kind of relationship, including marriage.

1. Try to keep in mind what the real issue is and confine the confrontation to this issue. Refuse to get sidetracked into other matters that have little to do with the issue at hand. If you are hassling over finances, don't turn the discussion into a dissatisfaction about one of the in-laws.

2. Keep your partner's point of view and feelings in mind. Keep asking yourself, if I were in my partner's shoes, how would I feel? This is a place for empathy.

3. Keep an open mind. Don't shut out the possibility of considering a point of view other than the one you have. Don't establish a fixed position from which you are unwilling to move.

4. Avoid using highly charged words or phrases. Don't engage in name calling.

5. Don't hit "below the belt." Most people have a level of tolerance below which they cannot accept attacks. Learn what this is for your partner. On the other hand, don't wear your "belt" around your neck. Toughen yourself to be able to accept reasonable aggressive opposition to your ideas.

6. Be conscious of the tone of your voice. Your facial expression may be more important in communicating your true feelings than the words you use. Your facial expression and body posture are also effective forms of non-verbal communication. Some people exaggerate these forms to a point where they convey meanings that the communicator does not intend, which may block the negotiating process.

7. It has been said that when a person faces an uncomfortable situation he may engage in fight, flight, or a freeze. If you must fight, fight fairly and don't run away, refuse to talk or lock yourself in your room. Also, learn when and where to have conflicts.

8. Give as much time to listening as to talking. Listening means attentively concentrating on what the other is saying and asking what it means. Let your periods of silence be for more than getting your breath and deciding on how you are going to counter your partner's arguments.

9. The point of your confrontation is not for one to win the other to lose. It is to arrive at a point you can both live with. The end needs to serve the best interest of both. There would be little gained if you won the argument and lost a friend.

10. Show love even if there is no agreement. Agree to disagree if necessary. Remember there is always time later to continue working on your differences. If you cannot arrive at a solution this time, you may be able to do so later.

11. Have patience and continue to work on the art of communication. Bargaining and negotiating make up a skill that no one ever perfects. But as you work to become more skillful, life will become increasingly interesting and fulfilling.

If the partners follow this plan there would be a good chance that the consequences of conflict would be functional for the relationship.

A Freshman at Princeton

Seema Misra

Yester day, I had my last class. I thought I would feel some grand emotion, but I really didn't feel anything. I suppose it's only natural that you never know exactly what you've experienced until after it's over.

So I suppose my first year of college is over -- almost. So what have I learned? (besides two semesters of force equals mass times acceleration and the symbolism of rotting strawberries in Death in Venice). Not that academics aren't important. That's why I went to Princeton in the first place. It's just that college is a lifestyle -- it's an experience that has shaped my very being, the very essence of my personality, so much more than eigenvectors ever could.

The one thing you should never avoid is examining yourself -- no matter how afraid you may be of what you see.

A girl said something to that effect last semester at a Workshop on Racial Awareness; and if I had to name the most important fact that I've learned this year that would be it. I suppose that being aware is especially important at a place like Princeton where it is quite easy to become part of a homogeneous community.

Princeton is an idyll. Only the most minute fraction of the student population at Princeton is truly underprivileged. I could hardly consider myself a minority. My parents went to college; most of the people who went to my high school went to college. I am a part of upwardly mobile America. It didn't take too much courage for me to attend Princeton -- I used to think that real fear was being afraid of getting a B in college or meeting a girl who spent $1000 on her credit card in one month. Both incidents have happened and neither made too much of an impression on me.

No -- I remember my first week at Princeton. I was a part of "Urban Action". We were a group of freshman who went everyday to Trenton to help renovate low-income housing in Trenton. The object was to get to know other freshmen before beginning classes. During the day, we would do things like help a mother panel walls and play with her three children, who were the product of three different fathers. At night, we came back to Princeton and on the way we passed all the black mothers who, after taking care of white Princeton babies, were going back to take their own black sons off the basketball courts. I recall that incident clearly.

And I remember the night of Doctor King's Workshop where he pummeled into our brains the meaning of prejudice. He offended us when he insisted that we were prejudiced. If circumstances forced you to spend three weeks in a stranger's home, wouldn't you naturally choose the house of a white man's over that of a black man's? So many of us insisted we wouldn't but what do we know about what society has conditioned us into believing?

I knew that I would choose the white man's house: I went to the Oriya Convention at Saginaw last year. Some girls and I went into an elevator but we had to leave when a few members of a black wedding party entered also. Oriya mothers didn't trust them to be around "kala loka". As girls, we're taught to be afraid of being raped, of being killed. Then again, we're all afraid. Those black people live with the knowledge that no matter what anyone says, someone will always leave the elevator when they enter. My mother never told me that black people were murderers. She has quite a few black friends. But of course, the newspapers tell me a black man has more of a propensity to be a criminal.

I face discrimination too. My skin may be brown but few people will be afraid that my brother will murder their mothers or rape their sisters. They'll just hate him because he'll steal their job or smell of curry powder. Big deal.

At the end of that workshop, Dr. King invited us to share our experiences with the audience. Maria Lopez is from Los Angeles -- that's the city, not one of its many suburbs. Before I heard her speak, I had never understood why Chicanos found their Chicano Caucus so important. She told us how hard it was for her to even apply to Princeton. Her friend wanted to be a doctor. She could have gone to the University of Los Angeles but fear stopped her. She was afraid of what the white people would say to her. She was afraid of ever moving out of her barrio, her neighborhood. I could have gone to Penn State on a full scholarship. I chose Princeton for the contacts.

And so what's the point? Is it that I will have a wonderful, WASPy life just because I'm a different class of minority, a different type of second-generation immigrant? Every time I look at a J. Crew catalog, I remember exactly how preppy Princeton really is. I never actually saw anyone who looked like the models in that catalog until I came here. And I get a new catalog at least every month. I suppose the people at J. Crew know what Princeton likes and what Princeton is like.

The models in that J.Crew catalog are very pretty, very clean. You know, Maria's pretty too -- I think she's considered "exotic". Exotic, that's what I am too, I guess. I'm not exotic: I'm Indian. I am an Indian. And I struggle. And I face people who will always believe that the minorities they meet at Princeton are an "exception". And I get frustrated when my classmate Jack tells me that his goal is to be "independently wealthy before I'm 30". And so I go to Trenton every week to play with children who go to a community house after school because their mothers work.

Oh -- and of course -- I try really hard to get good grades at Princeton so that my children can go there too.

Ananda Fund Activities in Orissa

Surya Kanta Das

(Since 1961 The Ananda Fund has been awarding scholarships to students in rural Orissa. Annually about 160 students get monthly scholarships. A brief account of the founding of the fund is given at the end of this article. It is altogether fitting that the Annual Report for the fund be published in the Journal of the Orissa Society of America. Prof. Surya Kanta Das has been administering the fund since its inception)

In the academic year July 1988 through June 1989, Ananda Fund scholarships were awarded to 113 boys and 49 girls in 15 different high schools of Orissa. Two of the schools are exclusively for girls. They are: Barapali Girls' High School, Barpali (Sambalpur district) and Kunjabihari Girls' High School at Kantilo village in Cuttack district.

The parents of the winners of the Ananda Fund scholarships are poverty-stricken villagers, and with a wide variety of occupations. One is an operator of a trolley rickshaw in the village market. Another is a small shopkeeper selling betel leaves. The brother of a student (whose father is old and jobless) sells aluminium utensils and feeds the family. Many parents are small cultivators, raising one single crop of paddy in a year. A village barber's son is an Ananda Fund scholar, who himself helps his father in the haircutting saloon. Another pupil's father is a door-to-door salesman of vegetables and similar farm products. One father works as a labourer for a forest contractor dealing in timber. The son of a village washerman is also receiving Ananda scholarship this year. In case of two of our students, their mothers are widows and run their family working as domestic servants, earning free meals and 100 rupees each as monthly salary.

Our program of giving school uniforms, and textbooks is widely appreciated by teachers and students. Nearly 60 students benefit under this scheme. Those who do not qualify for monthly scholarship of Rs.20, get either textbooks or school uniforms. The headmaster gives them a new pant and a new shirt twice a year from Ananda Fund grant to the school. The headmaster takes the trouble of getting the uniforms tailor-made locally and with utmost economy.

Ananda Fund has been sponsoring the Mansinha Memorial Essay Contest each year since 1974. For the year 1988 the contest was organized on the topic: "Mansinha's philosophy of life as reflected in his writings." First prize of Rs.350 went to a young lady of Ramadevi Women's College at Bhubaneswar. The second prize was of Rs.300, won by a student of Ravenshaw College. Third prize of Rs.250 went to an Oriya student of Delhi University. Prize distribution ceremony was held on 20th January under the chairmanship of Dr. Sadasiv Mishra, former Vice-Chancellor of Utkal University, and close friend of Dr. Mansinha.

Dr. Ralph Victor discovered, to his surprise, that many teachers, and of course students, have not seen their own country. For many years now the Ananda Fund has been sponsoring study tours of Orissa for selected students and teachers. A second program sponsors groups of teachers for study tours of India. A study tour for 20 teachers and 36 boys was completed in middle of June 1988 covering industrial and historical places of Koraput district. Another study tour for 12 high school teachers was conducted during December. The party visited Sri Aurobinda Ashram in Pondicherry and toured Madras city at Ananda Fund expense.

Ananda Fund has been created by Dr.

Ralph G. Victor and his wife Polly Victor. The Victors came to Orissa in the middle of 1950s and worked as volunteers in Barapali Village Project. The project was being assisted by American Friends Service Committee. At that time the Victors developed friendship with Dr. Mayadhar Mansingh who was the principal of G.M. College, Sambalpur. They used to discuss how to help spread of high school education in Sambalpur. On their return to the USA, Polly and Ralph Victor created the Ananda Fund, the name Ananda is related to their adopted son Andrew Ananda Victor. Andrew has also visited Orissa along with his parents in 1971.

Dr. Ralph G. Victor and Polly Victor now live at 5518 Columbia Dr. South, Fresno, CA 93727. Ananda Fund provides nearly Rs.50,000 a year for educational activities in Orissa. Preference is given to girl students in rural high schools.

The Government of India keeps tab on all money that is received by Indian nationals for religious, political, and educational purposes from foreign countries. A specific Indian legislation known as Foreign Contribution (Regulations) Act has been in the Statute book since 1976. The Ministry of Home Affairs, Government of India, New Delhi monitors the use of foreign funds because in the past foreign money at times was used for political purposes which were deemed to be undesirable.

Ananda Fund is a recognized and registered unit with the Government of India and is permitted to engage in educational activities. We submit our Annual Accounts to the Government of India as per rules of Foreign Contribution Regulation Act. The fund is operated according to both the letter and the spirit of the law. We have no religious or political connection whatsoever.

Prof. Surya Kanta Das has been Professor and Head of the Department of Commerce at Utkal University at Vani Vihar, Orissa.

ତୋର ଅସହ୍ୟ ସ୍ୱତିରେ

ଶାନ୍ତି ଲୋକ ମିଶ୍ର

ଉଆଁସ ରାତିରେ ମନ ଆକାଶରେ
 ବଡ଼ ଯେବେ ଆସେ ନଇଁ
 ତତେ ଖୋଜିବୁଲେ ମୁହିଁ
 ଚିକିଏ ସ୍ନାନୁନା ଚିକିଏ ମମତା

 ତତେ ଖୋଜି ବୁଲେ ମୁହିଁ
 ଏ ଦୁନିଆଁ ଭିତେ ଏତେ ମୁହଁ ଦିଶେ
 ଦିଶେ ନାହିଁ ତୋର କାହିଁ?
 ଏତେ ପାଦ ଚିହ୍ନ ସଂସାର ବାଲିରେ
 ତୋର ପାଦ ଚିହ୍ନ ନାହିଁ
 ଗଲୁଣି ସିନାଲୋ ଅନେକ ଦିନରୁ
 ଅନେକ ଦୂରକୁ ଡୁବି
 ମନ ମଶାଣିରେ ତୋର ଚିତା ଜଳେ
 ଏବେ ବି ଲୋ ରହି ରହି
 ବିଦାୟ ବେଳରେ ଦୁଇ ଗୋପା ଲୁହେ
 କେତେ କଥା ଗଲୁ କହି
 ବୁଝି ନ ବୁଝିବାର ହଜନାରେ ମୁଁ ତ
 ନାରବରେ ଗଲି ରହି
 ସେତେବେଳେ ଥିଲା ଶିଆଲି ମନରେ
 ଅନେକ ମିଛର ସ୍ୱପ୍ନ
 କିଛି ସତ ହେଲା କିଛି ଲିଭିଗଲା
 କିଛି ରହିଲା ଅପୂର୍ଣ୍ଣ
 ଏ ତପ୍ତ ସଂସାର ନିଆଁ ଭିତରେ ମୁଁ
 ଯେବେ ଜଳି ଜଳି ମରେ
 ତୋ ମିଠା ପରଶ ଏବେ ବି ଏ ଦେହେ
 ଶୀତଳତା ଭରିଯାଏ
 ଗାଲିଗଲୁ ଦୂରେ ଡାକି ନେଇ ସାଥେ
 ଶେଷ ଆଶ୍ରୟକୁ ଆମ

ମଲ୍

ଓଡ଼ିଶା ରାଜ୍ୟରୁ ଆସିବୁ ମୁହିଁ
ଆମେରିକା ଦେଶ ଦେଖିବା ପାଇଁ
ଆମେରିକା ଦେଶ ଅତି ସୁନ୍ଦର
ଆନନ୍ଦେ ଫୁରୁଛି ମନଟା ମୋର
ଦୁଇଟି ଦୁଇଟି ମୋଟର ଗାଡ଼ି
ରାସ୍ତାରେ ଚାଲିଛି ଧାଡ଼ିକି ଧାଡ଼ି
ବୁଲିବା ପାଇଁ ମୁଁ ମଲ୍‌କୁ ଗାଲି
ଗୋଡ଼ ଥକି ଗଲା ଧୀରେ ଚାଲିଲି
କେତେ ଯେ ଜିନିଷ ଅଛି ସେଠାରେ
ବସି ଦେଖୁଥାଏ ମଲ୍ ଭିତରେ
ସବୁଠାରୁ ମୋତେ ଲାଗୁଛି ମଜା
କେତେ ଯେ ଜିନିଷ ହୋଇଛି ସଜା
ଯୋଡ଼ି ଯୋଡ଼ି ହୋଇ ମେମ୍ ସାହେବ
ବାଲୁଥାନ୍ତି ସବୁ କେତେ ଦେଖିବ

କବିତା, ଚଢ଼େଇ ପାଇଁ ...

ଗୀତାଞ୍ଜଳି ରଥ

ଲାନ୍ତ ଆଖିପତା ତୋର ଶୋଇପଡ଼ି ଚଢ଼େଇରେ ,
 ଓଦାମାଟି ଦେଖିବାକୁ କେତେ ଆଉ ବାହୁଁଥିବୁ?
 ଦିନର ଠିକଣା ନାହିଁ ଅନିଶ୍ଚିତ ରାତି ଅଛି ,
 ଜୀବନ ପରିଧି ପରେ କେତେ ଆଉ ବୁଲୁଥିବୁ?
 ଆଗରେ ସାତ ସମୁଦ୍ର ପଛରେ ଟାଙ୍ଗରା ଭୂଇଁ ,
 ପାରିବୁନି ଚଢ଼େଇରେ କେତେ ଆଉ ଉଡୁଥିବୁ?
 କଣ୍ଠ ବସିଆସିଲାଣି ଜିଭ ବି ଗଲାଣି ଶୁଖି ,
 ବସନ୍ତ ଗଲାଣି ବାଲି କେତେ ଗୀତ ଗାଉଥିବୁ?
 ଝିପିଝିପି ବରଷାରେ ଡେଣା ତୋ ଗଲାଣି ଭିଜି
 କୁନି ଦେହ ଥରିଲାଣି କେତେ ଆଉ ସବୁଥିବୁ?
 ପାହାଡ଼ିଆ ଶୀତରାତି ବାହୁଁବାହୁଁ ମାଡ଼ିଯିବ
 ଅଶାନ୍ତ ଝଡ଼ ତୋ ଆଗେ, କେତେ ବା ସମ୍ଭାଳୁଥିବୁ?
 ଅମା ଅନ୍ଧକାର ମାଡ଼ିଆସେ ବାହୁଁବାହୁଁ
 ନିରୁଜ ତୋ କୋରଡ଼କୁ କେତେ ଆଉ ଖୋଜୁଥିବୁ?
 ଶ୍ରାନ୍ତ ପୃଥିବୀ ପରେ ଚିକେ ଯାଗା ଖୋଜିନେ
 ବସା ତୋ ଯାଇଛି ଭାଙ୍ଗି କେତେ ଆଉ ଗଢୁଥିବୁ?
 ଥଣ୍ଡା ଯାକି ଡେଣା ତଳେ ଉଷ୍ମ ମୁଁ ଟାଣୁଆ
 ନିର୍ଜୀବ ଅନ୍ଧାରକୁ କେତେ ବା ନିରେଖୁଥିବୁ?
 କିଆ ବୁଡ଼ା ଗପ ଶୁଣି ଡରନା ମୋ ଚଢ଼େଇରେ
 ସବୁ ମିଛ କଥା ଧରି କେତେ ଆଉ ଡରୁଥିବୁ?
 ଖିଆଲିଆ ମନଟାକୁ ବୁଝି ତୁ ତ ପାରିବୁନି
 ଶୋଇପଡ଼ି ବାୟୁ ମୋର କେତେ ଆଉ ଭାବୁଥିବୁ?
 ଦିଗନ୍ତ ପରି ବାରତା, ମନଟା ଅଦୃଶ୍ୟ ସୁତା
 ଖିଆ ଯୋଡ଼ି ପାରିବୁନି, କେତେ ବା ଛିଣ୍ଡାଉଥିବୁ?
 କୁହୁଡ଼ିଆ ଆକାଶରେ ତାରା ଗଣି ପାରିବୁନି
 କୁନି ଆଖି ଥକିଲାଣି କଥା ମାନି ମୁଦିନକୁ
 ତୋ ମନର କାନ୍ଥବାଡ଼େ ଇନ୍ଦ୍ରିୟକୁ ରଙ୍ଗ ବୋଳି

ମାତା ସହୃଦରେ ପ୍ରସବ ବେଦନା,
ସୁପ୍ତ ଥାଏ ବୋଲି ସନ୍ତାନ କାମନା
ସେ ଡୀର ବେଦନା ଭୁଲିଯାଏ ହେଲେ
ସନ୍ତାନର ମୁଖ ଥରେ ଚୁମି ଦେଲେ ।୫।

ବସନ୍ତ ପ୍ରାରମ୍ଭେ ଆସେ ପତ୍ରଝଡ଼ା, ତାପରେ ହୁଏସେ କିଶଳୟ ଭରା
ହୋଇଥାଏ ଯେଣୁ ସଂପୂର୍ଣ୍ଣ ଶ୍ରୀହୀନ
ସୁଶ୍ରୀ କରେ ବସନ୍ତର ଆଗମନ ।୬।

ଦୁଃଖ ପରେ ସୁଖ ଅଛି ଛାଇ ପରି, ରାତ୍ରି ଅବସାନେ ପ୍ରଭାତ ଯେପରି
ଦୁଃଖ ସହିଯିବା ସୁଖର ଆଶାରେ
ଲୁହ ପିଇଯିବା ହସ ଭରସାରେ ।୭।

ସଂସାର ସୁଖରେ ଯାଇଥିଲି ମନ୍ଥି, ତେଣୁ ଦୁଃଖଗୋଳେ ଯାଇଥିଲି ହଜି
ପରମ ଇଶ୍ଵର ପଦାରବିନ୍ଦରେ
ନିଜକୁ ସମର୍ପି ପ୍ରଣିପାତ କରେ ।୮।

Public holidays and religious festivals in India

Pongal: A three-day harvest festival and one of the most joyful events in the South. In Tamil Nadu newly harvested rice is ceremonially cooked. In the evening the cattle are led out in procession to the beat of drums and music.

Republic Day: January 26 marks the anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution in 1950 and is India's National Day. Celebrations in the state capitals are colourful. The celebrations in New Delhi, a magnificent parade of the armed forces and civilians, is followed by an impressive cultural pageant and a colourful folk dance festival.

The processions are specially impressive at Lucknow. In parts of the South, tiger dancers - men painted over with stripes and wearing tiger masks - lead the procession.

Holi: The most boisterous of all Hindu festivals, observed all over the North. It heralds the end of the cold weather. Men, women and children revel in throwing coloured powder and squirting coloured water on each other. Greetings and sweets are exchanged.

Mahavir Jayanti: The anniversary of the birth of Vardhamana Mahavira, the twenty-fourth Tirthankara, more than 2,500 years ago. The festival attracts pilgrims from all parts of the country to the ancient Jain shrines at Girnar and Palitana in Gujarat.

Easter: The Christian belief in the resurrection of Christ is celebrated with enthusiasm by the members of the community. Processions are taken out in some parts of the country.

Baisakhi: The Hindu Solar New Year Day. People bathe in rivers and go to temples to offer puja (worship). Baisakhi is of special significance to the Sikhs. On this day in 1699 Guru Gobind Singh organised them into the 'Khalsa', brotherhood of man. In Punjab, farmers start harvesting on this day with great fanfare. Villagers perform the 'Bhangra' folk dance.

Khaddar Sal: The birth anniversary of Lord Krishna, the incarnation of Vishnu and the author of the Bhagavad Gita (Song Celestial), is observed all over. It is celebrated with special eclat at Mathura and Brindavan where Lord Krishna spent his childhood. Night long prayers are offered and religious hymns are sung in temples. Scenes are enacted from Lord Krishna's early life.

Independence Day: August 15 marks the anniversary of independence in 1947 and is celebrated with due solemnity. The national flag is hoisted and the occasion marked as a day of dedication.

Onam: Kerala's most popular festival, celebrated with great enthusiasm, it is primarily a harvest festival. The most exciting part of the festival is the snake-boat race at several places in the palm-fringed lagoons.

Dasahara and Durga Puja: Among the most popular of all festivals, it symbolises the triumph of good over evil. Every region observes this 10 day festival in a special way. In the North, 'Ram Lila' recitations and music recall the life of the legendary hero, Rama. Large fire cracker-stuffed effigies of Ravana, symbolising evil, explode to the cheers of thousands of spectators. In Kulu against the backdrop of snow-covered mountains, villagers dressed in their colourful best assemble to take out procession of local deities accompanied by music on pipes and drums. In Karnataka, Dasahara is celebrated with magnificent pomp and pageantry. In Bengal and the East, it is called 'Durga Puja'. Images of Goddess Durga are worshiped for four days and, on the last day, taken out in a procession and immersed in a river or the sea.

Gandhi jayanti: October 2, the birth anniversary of Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of the Nation. Special prayers are offered at the Gandhi Samadhi at Rajghat, Delhi and celebrations are held all over the country.

Countless flickering oil lamps and lights are lit in houses all over the country making it a night of enchantment. Worship of Lakshmi, the Goddess of wealth, and fireworks and festivities are an essential part of the occasion.

Guru Nanak Jayanti: Also known as 'Gurupurab', it is the birth anniversary of Guru Nanak who founded the Sikh faith. For two days and nights preceding the festival, the 'Granth Sahib' (Holy Book) is read and on the day of the festival, taken out in a grand procession. The celebrations at Amritsar are especially impressive.

Children's Day: November 14, the birth anniversary of Jawaharlal Nehru is celebrated throughout the country as Children's Day. Groups of children participate in rallies and cultural programmes.

Id-Ul-Fiter: Celebrates the end of Ramzan, the Muslim month of fasting. It is an occasion of feasting and rejoicing. The faithful gather in the mosques to pray; friends and relatives meet to exchange greetings.

Christmas: Celebrated by Christians and non Christians with special enthusiasm. The bigger cities like Delhi, Bombay and Calcutta wear a festive look as Christmas bazaars and festivities are organised.

Bela Banerjee: Bringing Health to India's Villages

by LaVonne Godwin Platt

Published by Wordsworth, Newtown, Kansas 67114, USA

Paperback, 180 pages, $11.95 plus $1.25 shipping/handling

Reviewed by Lulu Mansinha

Bela Banerjee, born in what is now Bangladesh, has spent the major part of her adult life helping the people of Orissa. She was a social worker in the Barpali Village Service, and then rose to be the Pratinidhi for the Kasturba Gandhi Memorial Trust for Orissa.

In 1952 the American Friends Services Committee started a village development project in Orissa, in the village of Barpali, near Sambalpur. Both Bela Banerjee and the author LaVonne Godwin Platt worked on the Barpali project. Most people from Orissa, even if they have never heard of the Barpali Project, would recognise the Barpali 'paikahana', the cheap and sanitary toilet for the villages that was designed during the course of the project.

The Barpali Village Service (BVS) was of course much much more, with facets in agriculture, education, village industries, engineering and healthcare. Most of the workers were from Orissa, with a few from other parts of India and a few westerners.

One can list the various accomplishments of Bela Banerjee during her stay in Barpali. But far more than any description is the spontaneous emotion she evoked when she revisited Barpali in 1982, thirty years after she first arrived there. Bela and the author of the book, LaVonne Platt, walked down the main road to visit Bhavani Pradhan, a former BVS village worker who managed a weaver's cooperative. A woman stopped and hesitantly asked 'Didi?' Bela stopped and spoke to her. The news spread. Soon there were small crowds, mostly women. Some ran to hug her, others said "Namaste!". One said 'I never thought I would see you again. Now that I see you I see god.' A woman ran into the house to bring her daughter, whose birth Bela had attended, and the daughter's daughter, to see and show Bela. One person told a story of how the Barpali latrine, which Bela had given him, was stolen. He found the culprit and got the concrete slab back.

On the road along the side streets people gathered and discussed if it is true that Bela didi is back. They called out to her when they recognised her. With all the greetings and salutations, it took them an hour to walk the half mile to Bhavani Pradhan's house.

They visited Himal Guria who proudly showed off her husky son, Shantuni. Shantuni was born prematurely, weighing one pound eleven ounces. Bela had nursed him to life. Bela laughed, amazed at Shantuni's muscular build, saying that his legs at birth has been thinner than her fingers.

An elderly man stopped Bela and said 'Today is lucky for me to have seen you'. An old woman bent down to touch Bela's feet and said 'You are a god. My daughter was burnt and you healed her'.

All this respect, affection and adulation for a person who was practically abandoned by her mother because she brought bad luck to the family. Bela's father died of cholera shortly after her birth. She was born near Dhaka, now in Bangladesh, to her father's third wife. The first two wives had died of cholera earlier. Because the newborn girl brought ill luck, her mother simply ignored her and refused to feed her. But for the kindness of a servant, and an aunt, Bela would not have survived. The family land from which they received a small income was soon grabbed by relatives and hard times befell. They moved to Calcutta. After a few years Bela, who had no schooling, got a job in the Bengal Social Service Agency.

There is some innate quality in some individuals that attracts loyalty, friendship and affection. At each turning point in her life Bela has had friends who have propelled her through life with a determination. In Calcutta she developed a friendship with Dr. Lies Goempertz, a lady doctor, a refugee from Hitler's Germany. She insisted that Bela enter a midwifery training course in Calcutta. This was her first education. After completing the short training Bela got a job with the Friends Service Agency in Calcutta. After a few years Joan Court, another friend of Bela, made all the arrangements for Bela to go to England for training as a nurse. Bela, with no formal schooling and with just passable English, went to London with a scholarship. When she came back, she joined the Barpali Village Service.

While on the project she took leave and visited Lies Goempertz in New Zealand for six months. After the project was finished, she travelled in United States and Canada, staying with various families who had participated in BVS and knew Bela. Never having had much money, all her travels were planned, arranged by her friends worldwide.

But Bela Banerjee's life must not be judged only by her foreign travels. Her early life is one so typical of the poor in India (and everywhere else); the struggle for food and shelter; the hard work simply to keep from starving; no time left for schooling etc.. Most of us who come from Orissa, either have such a background or know many who did. But such is the mentality of man that once we have pulled ourselves up, we tend to ignore those who could not. We can but admire Bela Banerjee that she did not forget. She devoted her life to serve those who needed her. She never married. But in a sense her family is made up of the hundreds of lives that she has touched and made a little better; her children are all the babies she has delivered and nursed through various crises.

For two years after the BVS project started I was a student at the nearby Gangadhar Meher College in Sambalpur. And yet, I am somewhat ashamed to say, I was only vaguely aware of the project. For reasons that I do not comprehend even now, my mind, and those of the others that I knew, were preoccupied with our own future careers. There was perhaps a sprinkling of any true idealism in us. While we recognised Gandhi and Nehru and all the other great leaders of India at that time who gave up promising personal careers to devote themselves to the people and the country, we never were inspired enough to do the same. We were 'bright' in the sense that we got good grades. We heard all the speeches but were not bright enough to understand and relate the speeches to our lives and our own plans and to the future of the country.

Much of what I know about the Barpali project was from my 'uncle' and 'aunt', Ralph and Polly Victor, who gave me a home away from home when I was a graduate student in British Columbia, and they lived in Seattle. They were part of the BVS for two years. I had never met them in Orissa, but over the years I heard the stories of Barpali, half a world away, sometimes at home on Mercer Island, sometimes in front of the campfire at the side of the brook at their cottage in the Wenatchee National Forest. Human memory is amazing. Except for the stories from uncle and aunt some thirty years ago, I had not had any contact with the BVS. Yet when I read that part of the book, the people and events all suddenly became alive.

In 1978 Bela joined the Seva Samiti, a project for women and children in the village of Haridaspur. Her main work was at the small hospital and the surrounding 35 villages. As before, she started working to improve nutrition, healthcare and the care of the young children in the area. Then in 1979 she became the pratinidhi (Director) of the Orissa Kasturba Gandhi National Memorial Trust (KGNMT). She was hesitant to accept the position because she had no administrative experience. But friends assured her that they will look after that part.

Mahatma Gandhi started the trust in 1945 to benefit the poorest women and children in India. The first pratinidhi in Orissa was Ramadevi Chaudhuri. In Orissa the KGNMT operates ten projects, including one at Satyabhamapur, the headquarters of the trust. Bela's task was to visit and oversee the projects, as well as raise funds for the trust.

In many Oriya folk dramas there is a character called 'Niyati'. The story is usually a morality tale, with good ultimately triumphing over evil. At critical turning points in the drama, Niyati comes on the stage and delivers a strong moral monologue, acting as the conscience of the hero, who sooner or later takes the correct decision to bring the tale to a happy ending. Perhaps Bela Banerjee is the Niyati in our lives. Her story should act as a jog to our conscience.

We have to thank LaVonne Godwin Platt for writing this book and letting us have a glimpse at the life of an extraordinary lady, who has devoted her life to improving the lives of others. In 1982 Ms. Platt spent six weeks in India with Bela Banerjee, travelling to all the places she worked and talking to everyone who knew Bela. Ms. Platt is the author of two other books.

COLOPHON

This journal has been typeset and composed for the most part on an IBM XT clone and printed out on a laser printer. The English text is set in Zapf Calligraphic, a digital version of the well known Palatino font. Most of the Oriya language prose is typeset in Odissi. The Oriya poems are typeset in Sebati. Both the digital fonts have been designed by Gagan Panigrahi, with help from Sabita Panigrahi and Lalu Mansinha.

ABOUT THE JOURNAL

The Journal of the Orissa Society of America serves the community of those who have some link, however tenuous, with Orissa. Most of us older ones were born in Orissa. The younger members have been born in United States or Canada of parents who hail from Orissa. Yet others may have had the good fortune to reside in Orissa for some length of time. You are welcome even if you have only a reading knowledge or just a passing interest in the people, life and culture of Orissa. However your bond with Orissa formed, you are welcome to form a bond with us.

We have a special soft corner for children and youth of all ages. Much of the writing that we do is aimed at those of us who grew up in America and know Orissa from the anecdotal descriptions from the elders. Our philosophy is that we will publish all contributions, such as articles, poems, sketches etc., from our youthful readers. We particularly welcome critical views of us adults through the eyes of our children. The ultimate aim is to pass on the torch, within a decade or so, to a generation that knows Orissa only as a place to visit every so many years.

We are only marginally more selective for contributions from our older readers. In general we are interested in just about everything that interests you. We do not particularly wish for learned, pedantic articles on any subject. All we request of you, our contributor, is to remember that it should be interesting reading. There are of course limitations of space in JOSA, and of good taste.

A transverse state of the prostate

the prostate and the seminal vesicle*

Our new multiplane probe

This new probe has been especially designed for transrectal prostate scanning. Its unique construction allows the presentation of images in the transverse, longitudinal and all intermediate planes.

Advanced transducer technology using a single 7 MHz crystal ensures high image resolution in all planes, as well as stable and reliable operation.

The focal range of the transducer is optimized for prostate scanning, but can be adjusted to any exact position due to the built-in balloon inflation facility.

The 8551 probe scans a 112° sector angle and can be used with either of the Bruel & Kjaer ultrasound scanners. Scanning plane information and indication of the rotation axis is present on the monitor at all times.

Ultrasound-guided biopsies can be performed both transperineally and transrectally. Transperineal biopsy is performed by means of a puncture guide attached to the probe, whereas transrectal biopsy is performed through a puncture canal inside the probe. This design allows biopsies to be taken while the balloon is inflated.

A stepping unit for volume determination, and a matrix for radioactive seed implantation are available.

Call Bruel & Kjaer for more information or to arrange a free demonstration in your own clinic.

The OSA 1989 Directory

L. Mansinha

A technical note: Many Oriya names may have several different English spellings. Although identical in sound, the listings of the same Oriya name may be widely separated in an English language directory; consider, for example, Mahanty and Mohanty. To group all the same Oriya surnames together we have adopted a short list of sorting surnames. These represent my personal, and sometimes arbitrary, choice. Note that the actual English spelling of the surname is not changed. The sorting surname is used only for alphabetic ordering of the Directory. Please remember to look up the list below before starting a directory search. All other surnames are listed according to the English spelling.

STATE BANK OF INDIA

Earn highest interest

We pay the highest interest rates allowed by law on money deposited in India. No bank can pay higher rates on Foreign Currency Non Resident (FCNR – US dollars or pounds sterling) or Non Resident External (NRE – rupee) accounts.

Fast, efficient service

You are a valued customer at SBI, not an account number on a computer screen. Our employees give you fast, efficient service with up-to-date account information. Deposit your money in India and get personal banking service with all the benefits of modern banking technology. Our computerized services are spreading in India to continually improve our services for you.

It's easy to bank with SBI

Open and operate your accounts by mail. Or call us toll free to get current interest and exchange rates, account application forms or for information about your personal banking needs.

Branches where you need them

When you bank with India, it's not good enough to have branches in Calcutta, Bombay, Delhi and Madras. When you need banking services in Leh, we have a branch in Leh. We have branches in Ernakulum, Kurduwadi, Kottayam, Bundi, Unjha, Bastar, Chandigarh, Manali, Guwahati, Gunajhar, Sangrur, Karim Ganj, Shillong – over 11,000 offices in India, with several branches in each of India's major cities.

India and her people must grow and prosper together. SBI is India's premier commercial bank, providing financing for small business development just as much as for major corporations and hi-tech developments. We match the stride of our people toward new horizons.

You can benefit by banking with SBI

- * No income, wealth or gift tax in India
- * Low minimum balances; no service charges to maintain account
- * Deposits fully repatriable in dollars
- * Loans freely available against fixed deposits
- * Earn interest from day of deposit
